The highlight of her life was spending time with her family. She and Bryon were always having her mom and dad over for dinner. Being with her nieces and nephews and attending their activities brought her great joy. She looked forward to her annual baking marathons with her mom, sisters and nieces, making apple pies in the fall and goodies for Christmas. Those who knew Rhonda well will remember the joy she found in her seasonal decorations, especially her Christmas Village. Bringing the family together for holidays was always important. She was the first one at the table for games and cards. Rhonda was an organizer, from tending to her home and flowers, to planning her travels with Bryon and family. She was a perfectionist. Rhonda felt blessed for her many wonderful friends and their children, who held a special place in her heart. The Friday Morning Rosary Group was her rock and inspiration. She was also a member of a Catholic Women's Book Club.
